

THESIS EMBARGO EXTENSION REQUEST

Also referred to as Delayed Release or Delay of Publication.

Publication of your thesis by the University of Toronto is a requirement of your degree; it is U of T's intention that there be no restriction on the distribution and publication of theses. Your thesis will be released after convocation and will be freely available to the public in an online environment.

In exceptional cases, you may request an embargo (also known as delayed release or delay of publication). Acceptable reasons for embargo include:

- currently seeking publication of part of your thesis in a journal, or publication of the thesis as a book
- a patent is in process
- content of a sensitive nature in the thesis, the publication of which might endanger the wellbeing of the author or of persons associated with the work

While an embargo is in effect, the abstract and citation for your dissertation will be visible in the database, but the full text will not be available for researchers to view or purchase.

In certain circumstances, an extension to the original embargo may be requested. Your Supervisor and Chair must sign your request before submission to the Dean of SGS for approval.

To Request an Extension to an Original Embargo

Submit the signed form by email to sgs.masters@utoronto.ca using the Subject Line: Thesis Embargo Extension: Student Last Name, Student Number. The form should provide a detailed rationale for continuing the embargo and should include an expected embargo expiration date up to 5 years from the convocation date.

Contacts & Additional Information on Embargoes

- Please email sgs.masters@utoronto.ca with any questions about the thesis embargo process, including questions about extending your initial embargo request.
- Visit the SGS website for additional information about thesis submission including embargo requests.

THESIS EMBARGO EXTENSION REQUEST

To request an extension to an original embargo or delayed release of thesis, this form must be submitted to the School of Graduate Studies by email to sgs.masters@utoronto.ca. Use the Subject Line: Thesis Embargo Extension: Student Last Name, Student Number. A copy should be retained at the author's graduate unit.

Author's Name		Month/Year of Convocation
Thesis title
Student Number	Degree (Master or Doctoral)
Date	Author's Signature

Requested Embargo Expiration Date: (maximum 5 years from date of convocation) _____

Reason for continued delay of publication (please select one; attach an additional letter if space required):

- Seeking publication of part of the thesis in a journal or publication of the thesis as a book

Name of publisher or journal _____

- A patent is in process

- Content of a sensitive nature in the thesis, the publication of which might endanger the wellbeing of the author or of persons associated with the work (please elaborate)

Chair's Name	Chair's Signature
Date	Graduate Unit or Department

SGS Dean's Signature	Date
----------------------	------